Subject: Curious

I saw the review add in Saturday's paper. I'm curious as to how the employer has more say over a hearing loss claim than the person making the claim. In the case of the provincial government a staff person who wasn't even in the employ of the agency at the time of the hearing loss being incurred has more credence than I who suffered the hearing loss. Drs at HSC conclusively determined my hearing loss was directly related to my employment. How can an employee [REDACTED], who wasn't even in the employ at the time of the loss can have an credence in the resolve of the file. I did get a hearing aid however no compensation for the hearing loss. Shame on WCB and the former NDP government.
