Input: Ultimately the wcb act is meant for lawyers and not wcb recipients. From experience I believe it is very one sided and not geared to the actual people they are supposed to be helping and research is very clear you can appeal any decision but even if you win a decision from an independent tribunal for an appeal, the act basically says that it is up to the board of directors and so far no matter how legitimate one's appeal and case is records show that not a single person from info that is out there has successfully won an appeal due to so much info in the act that the average person really does not understand what it all even means except that they know they will not win no matter what is going on in ones life even when it means death which is my case and still have given me an ultimatum either I go to work which I cannot due to my work injuries and my cancer. I was told by my very first case manager not to worry they were there to help and I was covered till I was 65 w hich has proven not to be true, then be told you will be cut off no matter what. I truly cannot work, no one will hire me cause I am not reliable and pose a hazard to anyplace I try and apply to. Another case manager that I had said to me after I said what am I supposed to do "There are other forms of income" and my case has not even been resolved yet how is this helping me trying to read the act always points out that it is impossible to get them to help. who in there right mind would want to spend the rest of there living days with the stress of not knowing whether you can support your family or not. I loved my job as an electrician and would give anything to go back to doing that job but I CAN"T and the act being written on the basis of making money is a no win for nobody except the WCB themselves.
